National forum of Pharmacy students established in 2017 is a National Forum for Indian Pharmacy students. The Forum has a mission to improve the academic standards to make the students professionally competent when they pass out with a degree of pharmacy to secure their rightful respectable place on par with other healthcare profession.

It will not be too far-fetched to say that people who graduate from this field work right at the heart of human healthcare and work to make better treatment available to the medical fraternity. They are the ones responsible for the design, planning and development of prescription, care management and advising healthcare professionals on the range of medical options available. Now, knowing the immense importance of this field, it is important for us to realize that one can excel in this field if and only if they have a very strong base of knowledge. That is why it is important for a person to obtain their degree from a reputed institution. To help you make a choice about which institute you should join if you intend to pursue a career in pharmacy, we have listed the top 10 colleges offering a degree in this field. So what are you waiting for? Go ahead, make your pick.
